DAY 122 September 2021Leaders
Dialogue09:30 - 11:00
GMT+8OPENING PANEL*Legal Industry Transformation

1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

The pandemic has accelerated and amplified macro trends such as digitalisation and globalisation. These changes have impacted governments, economies and industries globally - including the legal industry. Across the world, governments and providers of legal services and legal technology have had to quickly adapt to meet the changed needs of end-users. This session is an intimate look at accelerated need for change and how government can lead the industry to transform to better serve citizens and businesses.

Digital Dispute Resolution - Facilitating Access to Justice in the Digital Age

1 Public CPD Point

Synopsis:
With various safe management practices in place to curb the spread of COVID-19, physical interaction and attendance for all things legal have likewise had to be reduced. Our legal and dispute resolution processes, however, cannot come to a standstill. With the use of technology, the Courts, law firms, pro bono organisations, and other legal service providers, have increased their offerings and reach to the public, to ensure that despite physical movement restrictions in place, access to justice remains on the move. Join us as our panellists share practical insights of their experiences on the ground and at the coalface of these issues.

Tackling Hacker Sophistry: Current Cybersecurity Threats and the Legal and Regulatory Responses
1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:
Ransomware attacks on healthcare systems, fake news campaigns to influence political outcomes, hacking of critical infrastructure and sensitive information. Addressing the wicked problem of cybersecurity is increasingly a matter of public-private partnership. What do we need to bear in mind from a legal and regulatory standpoint? How can this be done in a way that can help businesses without increasing complexity? This session grapples with these thorny issues, to guide us through the bewildering complexity and increasing sophistry of criminal actors.

How the 'Essential Eight' Technologies are Re-defining Capabilities in the Legal Industry

1 Public CPD Point

Synopsis:

The essential eight technologies have been identified as artificial intelligence, augmented reality, blockchain, drones, IoT, robotics, virtual reality and 3D printing. These technologies are having an unprecedented impact on the ways businesses deliver their services, create their products, and manage the risks of doing so. This session will focus on how technologies are creating demand for new types of skills and talent across a broad range of industries and how the legal industry is not immune from this. Beyond the 'hard' technology skills like programming and data science, how is technology shaping how we approach problem-solving, change, client management and leadership in the legal industry? What does the future legal professional look like? Is it one size fits all? What do individuals need to do to prepare themselves for the future of legal services? And how can legal businesses ensure that they recruit and retain the right kind of talent? This panel shares some insights.

Technology of Law

16:30 - 18:00
GMT+8AML/CFT Regulatory Compliance and Risk Management by Law Firms in the Digital Age

1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

Law firms face increasing pressure to meet multi-dimensional regulatory requirements in the management of AML/CFT risks in their legal business. Analogue approaches to managing digital age risks in the legal sector make it increasingly difficult for law firms to keep up with the challenges of such risk management and compliance. This is a deep dive session on the issues faced by law firms in managing their AML/CFT risks and compliance obligations. Are there unique challenges associated with scale? Are current tools and approaches sufficient? What opportunities exist for the legal sector to adopt right-sized solutions in managing compliance obligations? We will examine the global and local perspectives and identify best practices and legal tech solutions. Might some form of "cooperation" be the answer for smaller law firms?

That's the Way the Cookie Crumbles
1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

The ubiquitous cookie pop-up notification gives us a hint of how pervasive tracking cookies are. But the landscape for tracking cookies is fundamentally changing. The impending demise of third-party cookies is expected to fundamentally affect the Adtech industry, shifting the balance of power towards first-party platforms. The ongoing debate gives us a hint of the importance of tracking cookies as a means for collecting data. The panel will provide an insight into how the Adtech industry relies on tracking cookies for both browsers and mobile apps, and the ongoing developments to find a more privacy-preserving way to achieve ad-targeting. The discussion will meld technological developments with recent changes to data protection laws and the impending revision to the "cookie law".

Reality Bytes: Emerging Legal Issues at the Intersection of Real and Virtual Worlds Using Video Games & E-Sports as a Microcosm

1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

E-Sports and video games - especially those which utilise Augmented Reality and Virtual Reality (AR/VR) are uniquely situated at the convergence of a number of real-world and virtual world law of technology issues. Legal and policy issues surrounding AR/VR, 5G low latency infrastructure, and sophisticated game-world economies that interact with real-world ones are just some of the issues that tech lawyers will face if they cater to clients in the video game and e-sports sectors. Arguably, the pill to swallow is no longer a simple choice between Red or Blue (yes, that is a Matrix reference) but the need to dive deep into the intersectional issues that arise between real, virtual, law, and tech that challenges how we approach the law of tech and how we practise technology law. This session reflects on these intersectional areas and the top emerging legal issues to watch.

GMT+8Evolving Roles and Regulatory Oversight of Internet Intermediaries

1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

In a Digital Economy, users of digital platforms and smart devices generate activity data in vast volumes and are dependent on how data is used by such platforms to help them be discoverable by consumers. The ability for small businesses to access data generated by their commercial use of digital platforms is one of the developing areas for regulatory oversight. This session will look at the evolution of the immunities and safe harbours for internet intermediaries, with a perspective of the developments in Asia. It aims to examine various regulations that attempt to address issues that have arisen - such as search ranking transparency, access to activity data, emerging best practices and restrictions on the internet intermediaries' use of data.

Legal Services in a Digital Economy - Innovation and Adaptation Journeys

1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

The days of referring to legal businesses other than law firms as alternative legal service providers are numbered. While regulatory stances may impact the degree to which various types of legal businesses have a presence in various parts of the world, it is undeniable that legal services businesses of many shapes and sizes are here to stay and thrive. In this session we hear from leaders of a range of legal services businesses on how they have innovated and adapted in order to create unique and useful legal products and services, and how they see the legal industry transforming to meet end-user needs through technology and innovation.

1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

It has been observed that “[m]ost regulators dealing with active tokenised markets have adopted a technology-neutral approach”. This session identifies key legal issues arising not just from the tokenisation of assets on the public blockchain, but the nature of blockchain-based financial transactions that may warrant further attention from lawmakers. It discusses the feasibility of a technology-neutral stance and advances the need for a set of guiding principles for a legal framework that addresses the unique nature of the immutability of a transaction or asset on the blockchain - particularly in the payments space. The session closes with some observations of what the impact of such a framework might be on the banking and financial services industry.

GMT+8Innovation Dialogue - Transforming the Private-Public Paradigm to Drive Legal Innovation

1 Public CPD Point

Synopsis:

Building an ecosystem of legal innovation and excellence is often seen as an uphill journey. But it doesn't always have to be. Examples around the world have shown how strong and successful public-private partnerships can fundamentally lift legal and justice systems to become innovative, competitive, and inclusive. Bringing speakers with deep experience in working with legal innovation ecosystems globally, this valuable session will highlight: (a) the importance of partnering across private and public silos for successful innovation and win-win outcomes; (b) potential pain-points and potholes in building successful private-public partnerships; and (c) global best practices in addressing these pain-points to drive momentum for innovation (as well as breaking down these best practices into their constituent elements).

Once the panel concludes, we will then transit to the prize-giving segment of the ALITA SOLIA Awards 2021! Excited to see if the finalists you support will be given the honour of the inaugural recipient of the ALITA SOLIA Awards? Alternative Alternative Assets: Navigating Intellectual Property Issues of Ownership, Value and Protection

1.5 Public CPD Points

Synopsis:

In recent history, NFTs have gone from being a secret obsession with CryptoKitties to a $69 million dollar purchase at a Christie's auction. As interest and investment in a range of blockchain-based alternative digital assets increase what issues around intellectual property ownership, valuation and protection are surfacing. What are the implications of the purchase and sale of these and do the existing laws address the unique nature of such transactions? This session is a deep dive into the rights and protections that are available to safeguard interests in these assets and guard against the inherent Herstatt risk.
